

R2 Reference Coding

Numeric reference coding follows the interrater form technique: Genericity uses codes 1 and 2, Specificity uses codes 3 and 4, and Definiteness uses codes 5 and 6.

Semantic Code Key

Code	Reference Dimension	Reference Name	Definition
1	Genericity	Generic Reference	The phrase refers to a class, kind, domain, or general concept.
2	Genericity	Non-generic Reference	The phrase refers to a particular situation, event, entity, dataset, or context-bound referent.
3	Specificity	Specific Reference	The phrase refers to a particular identifiable entity, event, institution, indicator, or amount.
4	Specificity	Non-specific Reference	The phrase is hypothetical, predictive, abstract, evaluative, general, or not a concrete instance.
5	Definiteness	Definite Reference	The referent is identifiable, unique, previously mentioned, or contextually known.
6	Definiteness	Non-definite Reference	The referent is introduced, open, nonspecific, or not uniquely identifiable in context.
